Wonderful Tale on the Screen

An epic tale of surging passion sweeping from the wide plains of the Argentine through the fascinating frivolities of pre-war Paris into the blazing turmoil of the German invasion of Northern France will be shown at Monterey Theatre for three days, beginning this evening, with matinees Friday and Saturday. It will be the first showing of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalpse," the $1,000,000 Rex Ingram production made for Metro, which has been the screen sensation of New York, Chicago, Boston, Pittsburgh, Detroit, San Francisco and Los Angeles. The picture, adapted by June Mathis from the great novel of Vicente Blasco Ibanez, has intensified the dramatic force of the original story and holds spectators breathlessly intent.

The director, Rex Ingram, has succeeded in concentrating the great struggle in a series of unforgettable pictures that flash out the quintessence of life at white heat. He makes us see above the struggle the awesome figures of the four horsemen, Conquest, War, Famine and Death, prophesied by St. John in the Book of the Apocalypse, charging into our very hearts. And through it all is the deeply human, deeply moving speciacle of intensely real people in their baffled attempts to readjust themselves to the demands of war days. "The Four Horsemen" is the fulfillment of the promise of a noble art in pictures.

Rex Ingram was assisted in making the picture by Walter Mayo, the photographer was John Seitz, and the technical directors were Amos Myers and Joseph Calder. In the cast that included fifty principals and 2,500 extras, the performances that stand out with most marked brilliancy are those of Rudolph Valentino, Alice Terry, Pomeroy Cannon, Joseph Swickard, Brinsley Shaw, Alan Hale, Bridgetta Clark, Mabel Van Buren, John Sainpolis, Nigel de Brulier, Virginia Warwick, Derek Ghent, Stuart Holmes and Edward Codnelly.

Red Cross Activities

The production section of the Carmel Chapter shipped to the forwarding station at Brooklyn, N. Y., August 20, 81 new garments for two year and ten year old children. It will close its depository for used garments by the end of this week. All that you can spare of clean and reasonably good clothing will be thankfully received, and forwarded. These materials are for the war torn countries of Europe, exclusive of Germany, Austria and Russia. These three countries are being looked after by the American Friends Service Committee, Fifteenth and Cherry streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Community Exchange continues to prove a benefit to our community and the cause of Missions, so there is a constant need for replenishing the stock. All desiring to foster the spirit of co operation kindly leave articles at Mother White's, Ninth street, between Casanova and Camino Real.

Poetic Drama at Forest Theatre

The beautiful story of "The Countess Cathleen" was told last Friday and Saturday evenings to audiences impressed with the beauty and spirit of Yeats' loveliest poem-drama, interpreted by a group of Carmel players. Directed by Herbert Heron and Mrs. Valentine Mott Porter, the cast of about fifty persons presented a drama filled with the spirit of mediaeval superstition—a play worthy of the traditions of the Forest Theatre.

The stage, with the lights dimmed by green gauze, created the first impression of weird mystery, which was enhanced by the strains of haunting music coming through the stillness of the night, the gradually increasing light disclosing the hut of Shemus Rua in the forest. The unique simplicity of the setting was one of the features of the production.

The music—so sweet, so weird—made up of mere fragments of old Irish melodies, by Edward G. Kuster, was a feature also and assisted toward sustaining the atmosphere of uncanny mystery.

Of the acting—good, bad and indifferent—much might be said, but lack of space and other considerations do not permit. It should be said, however, that the simple, unaffected sincerity of all who took part in the play was noticeable.

The chapel with its beautiful image of the Blessed Virgin and the Child, moulded by sculptor Joseph Mora, made the scene most impressive, and this combined with colorful costumes of the period, prepared by Willie T. Wise, enhanced the artistry of the production.

Those who witnessed both presentations opine that Saturdays performance was by far the best.

One-Time Carmeleno Dies in Oakland

Carmelenos, especially old timers, will learn with regret of the death in Oakland last Friday of Mrs. Josephine H. Foster, long a resident and prominent figure in this community.

Mrs. Foster came to Carmel and built here in 1905, and her home at once became the center of a group of people who did things. She was the founder and for a time the president of the Arts and Crafts Club. Carmel pioneers will recall particularly the "Dutch Market," which Mrs. Foster promoted.

The deceased was a native of New York, and was 79 years old at her demise. She is survived by two daughters—Mrs. W. J. Leavitt and Mrs. A. W. Baker and two grandsons.

An interesting gathering assembled for a tea social at the invitation of Mrs. C. W. Yates a few days ago. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Watts, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Silva, Mrs. Valentine Mott Porter, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Crane, Mrs. L. E. Hayward, Mr. and Mrs. Noah Whitney, Miss Laura Diersseu, Mrs. Margaret Church and daughter, Miss Beth Williams and Miss Swain.

Play Writing Course by Herbert Bashford

Arrangements are being made to organize in Carmel a class to study play writing under Herbert Bashford, the distinguished playwright, editor and poet. The course consisting of twelve lectures will be similar to that given by Mr. Bashford at the University of California, and a preliminary meeting will be held on next Tuesday night at 8 o'clock in the Pine Cone office to arrange the details.

The course in play writing will be a comprehensive one, and will include the technique of both the full evening play and the one act playlet.

Mr. Bashford is one of America's foremost dramatists, and is the author of many successful plays, among them "The Woman He Married," in which Virginia Harned starred for two years; "The Voice Within," which has been accepted for production by Henry Miller; "Taken In," a comedy in which Henry B. Walthall has just completed the season, and a society drama, which was recently given its premiere, and for which Thomas Vincent Cator composed the incidental music.

Anyone interested in the proposed class in play writing is invited to be present at the preliminary meeting at which the class will be organized, and further details may be obtained from the Pine Cone office.

Fresno Couple Married Here

The bride is also a French teacher. Both come of excellent families. The bride is a cousin of the officiating clergymen.

Alberto Charms His Hearers

In David Alberto's concert last Sunday night given at the Highlands Inn, through the courtesy of the management, the young musician reached heights of artistic achievement undreamed of by his most ardent admirers. By the medium of his commanding technique he carried his large audience with a mastery of the vehicle and the theme surpassing anything yet heard here. The beauty and spirit of the Alpine heights of Mozart seemed to brood over the place when Alberto began his silvery fantastic and stole into the more brilliant Beethoven Sonata.

He played as if inspired and with such abandon and significant power, leaping the gamut of tone colour that his selfless work was greeted with ovation after ovation. Seven times he was recalled for encores, twice after the stirring left hand nocturne of Scriabine, which caught his hearers in an ecstasy of rapport. In Papillons by Schumann the many themes were emphasized, and both the shoemaker theme and butterflies, the roisterous drinking songs of the tavern group of students and the orchestral voices were all heard in contrasting values. The definite individual quality of his playing marks his reading of the great composers.

Alberto's residence in Carmel this winter, to prepare a book on the new harmony and programs for a world tour; will tend to elevate the standard of its music and lead those teachers who are studying with him over the bridge between the old school and the new.

A season of concerts will be arranged for the winter under the direction of Mrs. R. B. Thudichum.

Music Studio at Monterey

Thomas Vincent Cator is opening a studio in Monterey, in the romantic old adobe which was formerly the home of Governor Alvarado, the first governor of California. This quaint old Spanish habitat, which is located on Dutra street, not far from the High School, was in 1836 the scene of many brilliant gatherings.

Mr. Cator will make a specialty of vocal instruction and coaching, and the great success that such pupils as Hulda Rienecker, Eunice Gilman, Claud Argall, Minnie Heidecke and Vasa Anikeef have made in concert and on the stage is adequate tribute to his ability

Play Cast Enjoys Spanish Supper

A very delightful Spanish supper was given Monday evening by Mrs. Susan Porter to members of "The Countess Cathleen" cast, at the Mission Tea Room. Among those were Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Dreyfus, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Kuster, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Greene, Dr. and Mrs. H. W. Morse, Miss Blanche Tolmie, Mrs. Olivia Warfield, Dr. and Mrs. Alfred Burton, Miss Ellen O'Sullivan and Herbert Heron. Mrs. Dreyfus sang many Spanish folk songs, Mr. Dreyfus rendered Victor Hugo and other French authors in their own language, Mrs. Burton favored with piano music, and Mr. Kuster entertained with his 'cello. Those present are agreed that a most charming evening was arranged.

Carmel people who are acquainted with the kindly official of the Bank of Monterey, Charles D. Henry, will sympathize with him in the death of his wife, which occurred at Stanford University last Friday. Mrs. Henry was the mother of Mrs. Herbert Hoover.

MUSIC MATTERS

San Francisco is anticipating another excellent fortnight of grand opera when Antonio Scotti, the great baritone of the Metropolitan, comes with his company of two hundred artists to the Exposition Acditorium next month. Geraldine Farrar will come, and four of the best tenors at present before the public—Jose Palet, the Spanish tenor, whose first American appearance will be with Scotti and Farrar in "La Tosca"; Charles Hackett, leading lyric tenor of the Metropolitan for the past two seasons; Joseph Hislop, Scottish tenor, and Morgan Kingston, the Welsh tenor.

Another Spanish singer assisting will be Angeles Otein, coloratura soprano, who will sing "Lucia" and "Gilda"; Alice Gentle, so well known and loved in California, will be there, as well as Myrtle Schaaf and Henrietta Wakefield.

A new stage is being built by Samuel S. Simons, technical director for the local manager, Frank W. Healy, which will be 50x100 feet—each seat will have a perfect view of the stage.

The Philharmonic Orchestra if Los Angeles has engaged some of the most prominent musical artists for the coming season. Already scheduled are John McCormack, tenor; Arthur Hackett, tenor; Harold Bauer, pianist, and Kathleen Parlow, violinist.

Ernest Newman, the eminent English music critic, has the following to say as to how the modernistic composer should be regarded by the community:

"No one asks the modern young composer to write like Beethoven or Bach; all we ask is that he write as coherently, as sensibly, as interestingly in his own way as they did in theirs. Theophile Gautier says that no genre is so hard to achieve success in as that in which everything is permitted; for the more freedom the reader grants you, the more exigent he is as to your use of it."

Gautiers remark is apropos of E. T. E. Hoffman and his French imitators, who thought the whole secret of Hoffman was in hins bizarrerie of character and incident, and failed to see that his constructive genius gave to the bizarre the same logic of inner life that a master of serious fiction gives to his more normal creations. Some of these young bloods of music think that all that is necessary to proclaim them geniuses is to put down on paper something that has never been put down before. Alas! Nothing is easier than that. The difficulty is not in writing harmonies that have a twinge in them, but in making us feel that the twinge may mean something and tell their own story convincingly.

"The Apocolypse," Paolo Gollico's five-thousand dollar prize oratorio, which was given its first performance in the gymnasium of Augustana College, Rock Island, Illinois, the seventh of June, was the outstanding event of the Biennial Convention of the National Federation of Music Clubs. This oratorio is appraised as one of the strongest scores America has produced, although it breaks no new paths in the realm of music, it is said to contain unity, fervor, and frequent dramatic power. In scheme, the libretto calls for a prologue and three parts. The Prologue is devoted to "Balshazzar's Feast," the first part being called "Armageddon," the second, "Babylon" and the third, "The Millenium." A narrator is used to give coherency to the work, though not to the extent of carrying on a lengthy relation of events.

The prologue, "Balshazzar's Feast," is set forth as representing the Persian Empire at the height of its sensuality and irreligion—drunkenness, idolatry and gluttony are impersonations. The Prologue ends with what is designed to represent the downfall of the old dispensation, signified by the words: "Mene, Tekel, Upharsin." Part one, "Armageddon," describes what war has been since Cain slew Abel; part two personifies Babylon as "the mother of harlots, the woman lacking in the maternal, the creative instinct, who has won sceptres and crowns through sin, but is destined to lose her power over man and to realize that she has drained the cup of prophecy. Part four opens with the words "And I saw a new Heaven and a new Earth, a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal proceeding out of the throne of God."

The text of "The Millenium" is taken from the Biblical Book of Revelation."

A recent concert was given at the Coliseum in Toledo, Ohio, by the Frank La Farge Artists' Quartet, consisting of Hazel Silver, soprano; Dorothey George, contralto; Sheffield Child, tenor, and Charles Carver, basso, with Mr. La Farge at the piano "In a Persian Garden" and the Indian love song of Lieurance were given. and the "Flanders Requiem." Mr. La Farge received an ovation for his two piano numbers, which were his own "Romance" and MacDowell's "Etude de Concert."

PLAYS AND PLAYERS

The open-air theatre is in the genius of our Italian traditions. Going back through the centuries, we find in nearly every decade in Italy some artistic effort of the sort, whether in the ruined circuses and amphitheatres of classic times, or in the courtyards of the princely palaces of the "Decadence." The natural stage sets of forest; of mountain or sea, the romantic background of ancient ruins, the clear skies and balmy air are so easy to find in Italy that open-air productions seem more characteristically Italian than anything else.

At Viareggio there is Enrico Pea, one of those adventurous mountaineers who make the region of the Carrara quarries one of the most strongly individualized districts of Italy. Enrico Pea built an open-air theatre in the beautiful "Bosco Appuano" near Forte Dei Marmi, capable of seating fourteen thousand people. He was assisted by the sculptor Raffaelo Ucella. The companies were improvised from any supply of actors available; these efforts gradually caught the imagination of the whole Tuscan seashore region, awakening the dramatic instinct in places where its existence was most unexpected. The result hs been the recreation of the old Italian "Maggio," a sort of mediaeval "mystery," in which companies of ordinary people turn actors for a day and recite the compositions of peasant poets in popular themes. The "Maggio" is neither a chant nor wholly monologue nor dialogue; the story of Dante's "Pia dei Tolomei," for instance, or the "Jerusalem Delivered" are popular. If the story is a humorous one, the acting mostly extemporized, makes demands on the comedy capacities of the cast.

Enrico Pea has produced Maeterlinck's "Monna Vanna," Hebbel's "Judith," the "Oreste" of Alfieri and the "Miles Gloriosus" of Plautus. He does not aim to effect a classic atmosphere; he has none of the splendor and pomp with which impressarios sometimes develop out-of-door staging—he is satisfied with the sky, the forest and the distant peaks of Garfagnana for a background and the reverent seriousness of his actors. His company drives down to the theatre in a wagon, taking a barrel of win, drinking publicly as the impulse prompts; the costumes are extremely simple, as is also the stage setting, a voyage being suggested by the dragging of a pasteboard boat across the stage. Yet the spontaneous abandon with which the actors throw themselves into their parts has been the dramatic sensation of the season in the "Apuan Forest."

has unwittingly been adopted into the home of his own father. The wife suspects this, but gives the child the same care she accords her own little son. The foundling is strong, and her boy is sickly, and, chagrined at her failure to produce a strong child, she substitutes the illegitimate child for the legitimate.

A powedrful drama has emerged from this theme; the mother sees her own boy gradually die while pretending that the other is hers and simplating the satisfaction natural in view of the contrasted circumstances of the two children. Finally her boy dies and the mother of the adopted boy comes to claim him and in the end obtains him. This play, at once placed Señora Concha Espina in the front rank of the contemporary Spanish dramatists.

Señora Concha Espina, the Spanish novelist, is becoming better known to foreign readers since the translators have become aware of her existence. Her new book, "Pastorelas," is a little volume of pastoral sketches and consists of the notations of a sensitive artist, who transcribes the simple incidents of life in the manner called "prose poems." Her success as a playwright is no less thn her success as a novelit,, and it is said the "El Jayon," a drama in three acts, has been translated recently. This play centres about a foundling child who

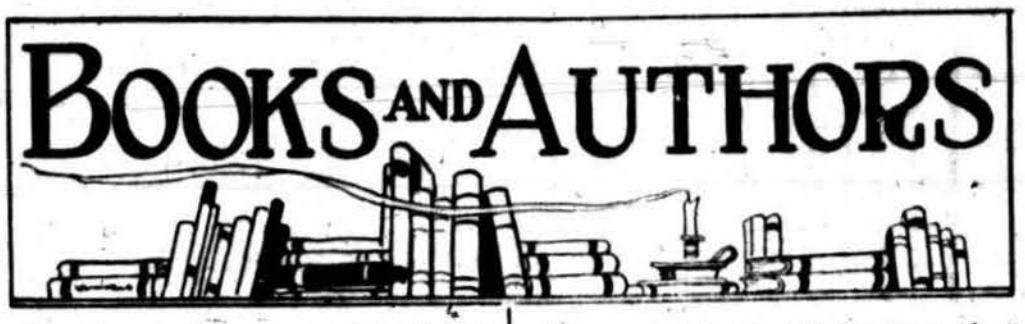
BOOKS AND AUTHORS



Anything but commendable is the specialty of American novelists, anxious to produce "best sellers," in writing stuff portraying the ugliness, sordidness and vulgarity of small-town life. In their anxiety to create something lucrative these royalty writers are overdoing the job. There is plenty of sordidness, ugliness and vulgarity in towns of all sizes, from Lickskillet to New York, and those who go about hunting for it are sure to find it. Along with these features of life in America and every other country beneath the sun are ample elements of nobility, heroism and beauty.

Charles Dickens, during his first American tour, saw nothing but crudity, vulgarity and braggadocio. He was entirely blind to the picturesque and the heroic in the pioneer portions of the new world. His failure to comprehend the true inwardness of what he saw, which he later confessed, was due to the fact that he was measuring America with an insular yardstick.

Some of our present day satirists and savage critics of rural America seem to be testing the life of villages by the standards of great cities, overlooking the fact that the small town has the same right to live its own life as has the big one, and that neither is a supreme court to fix by its own narrow ideas the proprieties in the other.

What a joke Lincoln's environment either in Spencer county, Indiana, or New Salem, Illinois, would have been to the literary smart aleck less than a century ago! How blind such superficial commentarians are to the realities of life in any community!

There was a time when Americans, perhaps, were peculiarly boastful, but today American civilization stands in need of more writing up and less writing down. The way to curb the tendency of novelists to write books which libel American life is to cease buying them; but there is a mean spirit of detraction and a desire to appear superior to one's surroundings that perhaps will always make some people anxious to read a book which satirizes their neighbor.

An interesting new book is Dr. Montesarri's "Manual of Scientific Pedagogy," which was published in England. An Italian reviewer says of it:

"Will the fact of its having the imprimatur of England make for its greater success. It repeats in summary form, the usual procedure, which is chiefly characterized by the illusion that what is artificial is natural. Some useful innovations and other perfectly superfluous ones are introduced into the kindergarten."

Brander Mathews, known to readers as a delightful and distinguished critic of books, is an authority on the drama, and as a Reverend Brahman of Columbia University, is also a successful author of juvenile literature. His "Tom Paulding" has just called for a ninth printing, is the report of his publishers.

If you desire to get the true slant on New England folk, especially the coast people and fishermen of the Cape Cod region, go to "Joe" Lincoln's books. They are classic in their delineations. No one in this country has been better able than he to transplant types and the atmosphere of a section to the printed page.

Mr. Lincoln is not one of those novelists who subordinates everything else to the drawing of characters. He gets a good character—frequently one of his books will contain half a dozen or more good ones—then he fashions plots that are worthy of the human material. His genius has been rewarded by about as large and enthusiastically admiring a following as any man writing in America today.

Between the appearance of "Cape Cod Ballads" in 1904 and the present time, upward of twenty-five stories of book length have come from the pen of Joseph Lincoln, besides a long list of short stories and many contributions in verse.

ART NOTES

Donald W. Meacham, well known New York artist, says:

"Washington is destined to become the art center not only of the United States, but of the New World. With the installation in the Library of Congress of the great collection of Whistler's works, a collection that has taken 30 years to accumulate, the nation's capital will have the nucleus around which will be constructed the new art center. Joseph Pennell, associate and biographer of the famous American artist, the greatest etcher of all time, has presented to the Library of Congress his great collection of Whistlerian art. Mr. Pennell and his wife have been collecting Whistler material for 30 years. During a great part of their lives they were associated with the artist in London. They lived around the corner from Whistler. They worked together at times and spent most of their leisure hours in Whistler's company. Consequently they know more about Whistler than any other living folk. Just before Whistler's death Mr. and Mrs. Pennell were designated as his official biographers. Few Washingtonions know that Whistler worked here at the very outset of his artistic career. While in Washington Whistler was employed a year at the coast and geodetic survey."

May Mott-Smith has the distinction of being the only woman medallist of renown in America. Her miniatures have attracted the attention of art lovers all over the world and she has won awards at all the important exhibitions in the United States.

Mrs. Mott-Smith is at present in Carmel, where she is sketching and planning her exhibits for the East and Europe. She has recently finished a medal of the famous sculptor, David Edstrom, who has said it is the finest likeness he ever had. The medal will be exhibited along with other work in the early fall.

An interesting event in the art world is the announcement of the opening of "The Little Gallery" in the picturesque and historical Robert Louis Stevenson house in Monterey. The Little Gallery has been founded by three very promising young artists, Miss Sybl Emerson, Mr. A. F. Gay and Mr. Price.

A small painting of the Stevenson House by Miss Emerson was in the current exhibition of the Carmel Arts and Crafts Club and was among the first sold, having been purchased by H. L. Kahn of Chicago. "The Little Gallery" will be open daily from 2 to 5.

Recent additions to the Helgesen galleries in San Francisco are two small canvasses by F. W. Cutting—"Sana Verbenas" and "Sand Dunes and Wild Flowers," excellent examples of typical California landscapes. Mr. Cutting has a picture at the current exhibition of artists at Carmel Arts and Crafts Hall, in this same style, which attracts much attention of visitors.

Miss Hildreth Miere of San Francisco is winning laurels in unusual fields. Mural decoration has been chosen by Miss Miere as her medium of expression, and out of the thirteen competitive exhibits in New York which she entered this year, she won first honors in eleven and second in two.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

AID FOR VETERANS

In additon to consolidating and coordinating the various agencies handling soldier relief, the Sweet bill which has just become a law, contains many new features which greatly liberalize the relief work. More adequate compensation is allowed for partial disability and the definitions of what constitues partial disability have been liberalized. Hospitalization and medical suffering from any disease or injury which originated during their term of service. All eye, ear, nose and throat troubles are included, although they were not under the old legislation. The terms of war insurance remain the same, but the methods for reinstatement of policies which have lapsed have been greatly simplified and the time of reinstatement extended. Compensation under the bill may now be claimed for one year from the passage of the law.

WORLD PEACE

There is a ring of deep confidence and strong faith in President Harding's predictions of the final success of the American move for world disarmament. In his recent speeches, formal and informal, there have been constant references to it, always with a gradual growing faith that it must and will come to pass. That faith is shared by millions of Americans. It will be the rock on which the cornerstone of the disarmament conference will rest in its beginnings. Faith, however, without works may come to little. The believer in the possibility of world peace, the foe of militarism and the friend of disarmament will do well to redouble his labors. The administration needs the help, the good will and the optimism of the nation back of it to aid in the fulfillment of that destiny believed in by the President.

INDIVIDUALISM ACHIEVES

All the great achierements of this world have been the result of individualisf. There was a time when man had to fight with his brute contemporaries for the possession of caves. He was so low in the scale of life that he could scarcely be distinguished from the higher order of animals. After countless ages by the slow process of evolution man has finally reached his present high position and this has been accomplished by stress and struggle. His present position has been attained by individual competition; man wrestling with nature and the brutes; man matched against man; thrift against dullness; energy against indolence; courage against cowardice; sense against stupidity; intelligence against ighorance; loyalty against disloyalty; virtue against viciousness. And it is this individual competition that ahs brought progress and civilization to its present state.

CRITICISM

Reasonable, fair-minded criticism is a valuable service, recognized by truth-seekers as an indespensible aid to effort. Opinions are gained by reading and hearing the views of the many and are of value only when based upon the assembled facts beyond the ability of an individual to acquire unaided.

School of Rhythm a Needed Institution

"The Dance incarnate! To watch you dance is an adventure in the Fourth Dimension," said Rodin to Florence Fleming Noyes when he saw her dance in Paris. Rodin recorded the event in one of his most exquisite feminine figures in action. Foremost among the teaching pupils of Mrs. Noyes are Agnes Kalman-Rush and Dorothy Manners Dreyfus, two of her most distinguished students, to whom she has entrusted the establishment of the Noyes School of Rhythm in San Francisco.

And, housed in a quiet and charming house a Noyes School which in its simplicity and dignity of furnishing somehow trails the mind back to the olden, golden days when Sappho sang her immortal lays on the shores of Greece.

In the studio house at 2016 Franklin Street classes of women and children are instructed in the principles and meaning of rhythm to sense the rhythm in all things ;to establish it in the mind and body and soul; to become a part of the rhythm which is the music and beauty of the universe. This is done in no mysterious or mystic manner, but according to certain definite and easily understandable rules of pedagogy, approved by some of the most eminent educators in America.

Agnes Kalman-Rush in charge of the San Francisco Noyes School is herself a dancer of rare beauty and grace. Dancing she is alternately all the figures of a great Greek frieze, teaching she is truly the disciple of Mrs. Noyes, whose aim and purpose is best expressed in her own words:

"It is our purpose to guide the pupil to normality, simplicity and reality, thus cultivating a love for all, that is natural, beautiful and true in life and art, and the ability to express this in the dance."

ITEMS OF INTEREST

Frederick R. Bechdolt departed Tuesday evening for New Mexico and Arizona to gather material for a new series of the Old West stories. He will be away about two weeks.

As the result of strong and numerous protests against the halving of the present county library appropriation, it is possible that the supervisors will fix the rate at 3 cents, instead of at 2 cents.

Miss Edith Chilver has resigned from her position in the Los Angeles public schools to open a school for small children in Carmel. The location and time of opening will be announced later.

Accommodations for at least twenty-five more pupils are provided by the addition being built on the small outbuilding on the grounds of our local public school. The Trustees had hoped to be able to engage a fourth teacher beginning with the term opening, but the average daily attendance is not yet sufficient to permit this.

There was a beach supper on Sunday night in honor of Pardow Hooper, who left the following day for San Francisco. The party adjourned to the Gottfried home for dancing. A partial list of those present includes Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Van Riper, Miss Susan Weed, Mrs. J. G. Hooper, Tom Hooper, Mrs Alpheus Bull, Harrison Godwin, Miss Beth Williams, Mrs. Alice Josselyn, Pardow Hooper and Mr. and Mrs L. E. Gottfried.

Our Teams Win

The second part of the Stickers' League baseball season opened last Sunday. Both the Carmel Firemen and the Carmel Carpenters registered a win. With two bus loads of local fans to urge them on the fire laddies defeated Castroville 5 to 4, while the Carpenters buried the Wows under a 27 to 0 score.

Inaugural Dance at Rancho La Playa

Those who made the ten-mile journey up the Carmel Valley on Tuesday night for a first visit and dance at Rancho La Playa were well repaid. Upwards of thirty machines turned into the enclosure wherein is located the new place of hospitality and good cheer.

Not only the splendid outdoor platform, but the spacious dining room as well was given over to dancing, and it was midnight when The Peninsula Four played the last entrancing waltz.

Both Mrs. A. D. Signor, the proprietor, and Harrison Godwin, resident manager, were the recipients of congratulations on their foresight in establishing this new country resort and their ability to maintain it.

It remains now for those who have seen the establishment only at night to make a daylight visit. The scenery from the Rancho is superb.
